Win brings out best in Boston

► No major damage, minimal arrests made ► Menino thanks fans, team
► Police presence will also be 'significant' at Saturday's Rolling Rally

► Bruins Captain Zdeno Chara lets the fans cop a feel of the Stanley Cup outside of the TD Garden Thursday.

Six people faced a judge Thursday for their "disorderly and destructive" behavior during the Hub's Stanley Cup celebration.

But despite the arrests, city officials praised the crowd of thousands who turned out near the TD Garden on Wednesday night for heeding the advice and demands of police.

"I want to thank the fans for acting responsibly," Mayor Thomas Menino said Thursday morning. "They did a great job. The Boston police did a great job."

In total there were seven people rounded up by officers, police said. Some were arrested and others were summonsed to court.

Three of the men, Justin Jerackas, Michael Trwari and Brandon Zagarella, were spotted by police breaking car mirrors as they walked along a North End street about 12:40 a.m., authorities said.

Trevor Legere allegedly shoved a Boston police officer who tried to help him when he said he had been hit in the face about 1 a.m.

Christopher Prader didn't wait for the game to end to try and incite a riot, authorities said. He allegedly cursed at police, daring them to arrest him and tried to get a crowd of people near Causeway Street to turn on police.

Brandon Shiels was stopped by police as he drove near Fenway Park and was allegedly drunk behind the wheel.

About 22 people were arrested during the last championship celebration when the Celtics won it all in 2008.

As for Saturday's parade, police Commissioner Ed Davis said there will again be a "significant" police presence.

"We've done this before and we're very satisfied with all of the preparation," he said. "We're hoping for a great day on Saturday."

Woman found dead in fire

BOSTON. A 64-year-old woman was found dead as firefighters battled a blaze in her Roxbury elderly housing facility Thursday morning.

Firefighters responded to the 131-unit Smith House on Shawmut Avenue about 5:45 a.m., fire officials said.

During the initial search, firefighters found the woman who was dead. An autopsy will determine her cause of death.

The cause is under investigation and the fire caused about $100,000 in damage. METRO

Rep. to stay mum about incident

BRAINTREE. State Rep. Mark Cusack, who was found after a budget session in the House chamber overnight with a female aide, said he does not intend to answer any questions about the alleged incident.

Cusack was cleared of any wrongdoing earlier this week after an internal investigation.

Cusack told The Patriot Ledger that he would not answer questions about the incident or why he allegedly gave the name of another lawmaker. METRO

App tracks commuter rail lines

BOSTON. The MBTA on Thursday released a beta feed of real-time data for Commuter Rail locations, allowing developers to create apps for smartphones.

The data provided by the T includes each Commuter Rail train's GPS-generated location, speed and predicted arrival at stations once that train's trip is under way.

Developers also have access to a feed of T-Alerts, which are posted by personnel. METRO

Sex tape pass for Edwards

RALEIGH. A North Carolina judge ruled on Thursday that former U.S. Senator John Edwards should be spared further questioning about an alleged sex tape with his then-mistress pending the resolution of new criminal charges against him. Superior Court Judge

Carl Fox postponed a deposition set for Monday in which the former senator was to testify under oath about his role in the tape. The deposition is part of civil case brought by Edwards' former mistress, Rielle Hunter, against Edwards' former campaign aide, Andrew Young. REUTERS

Rep.'s electile dysfunction: Weiner quits the Congress

▶ Weiner saying goodbye.

▶ Two weeks after sex scandal breaks, Weiner limps out ▶ Some say he was abandoned by the Democrats

After days of stubborn refusal to give up his seat amid scandal, Rep. Anthony Weiner resigned from office on Thursday, costing the Democratic party one of its most outspoken voices.

In the crowded senior center in Sheepshead Bay, New York, where Weiner first began his political career 20 years ago, the shamed congressman took the stage alone to end a weeks-long scandal.

"I had hoped to be able to continue the work that the citizens of my district had elected me to do," Weiner said. "Unfortunately, the distraction that I have created has made that impossible."

Man claims to have shot Tupac

NEW YORK. New York police are investigating an online posting from a man who claims to have shot the late rapper Tupac Shakur during a robbery attempt in 1994, a police spokesman said on Thursday. Convicted murderer

Dexter Isaac claims to have been paid $2,500 by music manager James Rosemond to rob Shakur outside a Manhattan recording studio in November 1994, in which Shakur was shot five times. Shakur survived the shooting but was later murdered in an unsolved 1996 shooting in Las Vegas.

Isaac is currently serving a life sentence for charges including murder, fraud and robbery. REUTERS

► 'West Side Story' undergoes an ambitious makeover that would work a whole lot better if the show were cast differently

When you're a Jet, you're a Jet all the way — but when you're not, you probably shouldn't be cast as the lead in "West Side Story." There's plenty to rave about in the first national tour of the recent Broadway revival, but the show's star-crossed lovers Tony (Kyle Harris) and Maria (Ali Ewoldt) don't make that list.

Harris' big smile and affable charm override any hint of smoldering passion while his vocal styling turns classics like "Something's "Tonight" and "One Hand, One Heart" into piano-bar fare. It's a classic example of a talented actor in the wrong role.

Ewoldt fares better vocally, but never captures the underlying sizzle of a young girl willing to risk it all for love. Like Harris, her smile is too bright and her demeanor too wholesome.

Michelle Aravena has no such problem in a nearly show-stealing turn as Anita. Aravena's heat reaches the rafters as she blows the doors off of Coming."

Plot points

The Jets and the Sharks battle for turf rights in this classic tale loosely based on "Romeo and Juliet." American teen and Jet, Tony, falls for Maria — a Puerto Rican girl whose brother is a Shark. Cultures clash, gangs do battle and Tony and Maria pay the ultimate price for love. Some dialogue is in Spanish and, though an admirable effort, feels forced and interrupts the flow.

"America" and seemingly channels the role's creator Chita Rivera in a stellar interpretation of "A Boy Like That."

The chemistry between Anita and her man Bernardo (German Santiago) is not forced at all. It's muy caliente, as the pair creates the only frenetic sexual energy in the show.

The show boasts extraordinary dancing, an incredible fight scene and a delightful rendition of the song, "Gee Officer Krupke."

Alexandra Frohlinger delivers the finest, most tender moment with a goose-bump-inducing "Somewhere" that boasts exquisite ensemble dancing and a rarely seen ethereal magic that reminds us why "West Side Story" still works nearly 54 years later.

Blessed with impeccably close harmonies and an imperishably chipper demeanor, the Andrews Sisters were a top act back in the '40s, touring across the world to sing to the troops during World War II and paving the way for many pop girl groups after them. Put the needle on 'The Record'

► The ICA takes its celebration of albums one step further with 'Vinyl Fridays' ► You've seen the art, now just get into the groove

While the art on display in the ICA's exhibit, "The Record: Contemporary Art and Vinyl," includes quite a few unexpected artistic uses for albums, Friday nights in June are all about the flip side.

"These events offer a glimpse into the record culture that is pervasive in the exhibition," says ICA Public Programs Coordinator John Andress. "While artists in the show use vinyl as an object, the DJs and vinyl sellers are engaging in the practical application of the record, both as a sellable object and a way to listen to music."

This Friday features DJs Studebaker Hawk and Dom Casual/MC Disagree. Next Friday also features DJs, as well as a "Rock 'n' Roll Yard Sale" and a collector's showcase of vinyl, free with admission to the museum.

The exhibit itself features photography, film, sculpture (Sean Duffy's "Burn Out Sun" is a highlight) and the one "practical application" that Andress mentioned: a record-listening station where patrons are encouraged to browse through albums chosen by the artists in the exhibit and then engage in use of the turntables available.

"The idea of connecting a visual through music is so disconnected for us," says ICA Associate Director Colette Randall.

But with Vinyl Fridays, that connection is now complete.

Roxbury Latin presents Tom Stoppard's '60s classic, which looks at the events of "Hamlet" from the point of view of Hamlet's buddies, who Stoppard turns into existential clowns as they delve into heavy subjects like free will futility and the value of art itself. You may appreciate normality anew after this trip of a play — if normality even exists, anyway!

THE MEANING OF THE CUP

► After days of wild celebration, it's time to reflect on the Bruins' first Stanley Cup in 39 years ► Our own Mike Naughton writes on the triumph's meaning to fans, and Jeff Goldberg chimes in on its significance to the team

THE STANLEY CUP FOR THE FANS

A night to remember

With minutes left in Game 7 Wednesday night, I felt a sharp, quick pain in my left arm.

It was my friend. She was pinching me.

"It's not a dream," she said.

It wasn't. That 4-0 score on the TV was blissful, amazing reality. The nerves were gone; the contentment had set in.

After a lifetime of rooting for the Bruins, I knew this city deserved this championship. The win meant a great deal to the growing fan base of a team that was once mired fourth in a four-team market.

For the new fans who don't recall Neely, Bourque or O'Reilly, it was simple excitement.

But for the diehards — the ones who passed on a Red Sox World Series game to go to the Garden, the ones who sat through Game 7 versus Philly, the ones who waited 39 years — it was everything.

Validation.

The B's are champs.

And it's wicked awesome. MIKE NAUGHTON

► Nathan Horton with the Stanley Cup.

THE STANLEY CUP FOR THE FRANCHISE

More Cups on the way?

The best part is, this Stanley Cup may only be the beginning.

The Bruins needed 39 years to close their Cup chasm. But like their peers, the Patriots and Red Sox, franchises that also needed decades to win championships, the Bruins are poised to make a run of titles.

As the parade winds its way through the city Saturday, the team would be wise to include ages on the placards bearing the heroes' names.

Patrice Bergeron, David

Krejci, Milan Lucic, Nathan Horton, Brad Marchand, Tyler Seguin: All 26 or younger. All will be back next season. And general manager Peter Chiarelli should have about $10 million under the salary cap to add more pieces.

"I'm not in the planning mode yet," Chiarelli said. "We've got some good players under contract and these guys are a great bunch of guys. Anything is possible."

After Game 7, Bergeron said "the future looks bright." And it really does.

JEFF GOLDBERG

► Milan Lucic hoists the trophy.

Picturing a celebration

As a photojournalist, you need to put yourself in the middle of a story to tell it properly.

But it's rare to find yourself in the midst of such unbridled joy as there was Wednesday and Thursday in Boston.

As soon as the Bruins won the Stanley Cup in Vancouver, thousands of hysterically cheering fans poured onto the streets. Some returned Thursday, when the team arrived home victorious.

Thomas' gutsy move pays off with a crown

A postseason for the ages

Bruins fans will never forget what Tim Thomas did this spring.

He pitched two shutouts in the finals, including his second Game 7 blanking of the postseason.

It was the first road Game 7 shutout in Stanley Cup finals history.

"That's the sign of a great goaltender," Bruins coach Claude Julien said of Thomas. "He was on top of his game from start to finish, and especially in this final round. He was outstanding every game. He was in the zone."

- Decision to return from Finnish league wasn't easy
- But it was clearly the right choice ► He's a legend

This wasn't the first time Tim Thomas dominated a postseason.

As MVP of the Finnish league in 2004-05, Thomas owned a 8-4 record with a 1.83 GAA for Jokerit.

Thomas almost returned to Finland the following year, having never been able to crack the NHL. Instead, at age 32, Thomas tried one last time, after eight minor-league and European seasons, to make his mark on the NHL.

Today, the worldly Thomas sits atop it. After a performance that stands among the greatest in NHL

"Winning the Stanley Cup is huge. It's the biggest accomplishment of my career thus far."

TIM THOMAS

history, Thomas is a Stanley Cup champion.

"I didn't want to think about the NHL because it seemed like it was so far away," Thomas said, the Conn Smythe trophy for postseason MVP sitting next to him, after the Bruins won their first Stanley Cup in 39 years. "I'm very happy that I made the decision to come back. It was a tough decision at the time, but it paid off in the long run in this case."

Thomas was at another crossroads after last season, a year removed from a Vezina Trophy and faced with hip surgery that left his future in doubt.

But Thomas started the 2010-11 season on fire and never looked back, setting the regular-season record for save percentage, then setting the postseason record for saves.

Making your very own Stanley Cup

Want to party like a champion? Tote around your own Stanley Cup during the Bruins parade this weekend in four easy steps.

Metro will show you how.

What you'll need to buy:

- Four plastic plant pots (one large, one medium, two small)
- Tinfoil
- Glue or tape, and lots of it.
- Some silver spray paint

Step 1

Place the large pot face down on the ground, then stack the medium-sized one, and one small one, face down, on top of that. The last small cup should go right-side up on the top of the stack.

Step 2

Glue them all together.

Step 3

Take the cup outside and spray paint it silver. Let it dry, then reapply. If you don't want to work with spray paint, cover it in tinfoil, taping or gluing where needed.

Step 4

Fill it with a drink of your choice, and celebrate like a champion. (Legally, of course.)

KEY LINEUP CHANGE

Thornton earned this one

If anyone on the Bruins is sensitive to the passion of the fans, it's Shawn Thornton. As long as that's the only time you refer to the Bruins' enforcer as sensitive.

As a yearlong resident of the Boston area, Thornton knows how special winning the Bruins' first Stanley Cup in 39 years is. A previous winner with Anaheim in 2003,

JEFF GOLDBERG

Thornton has hoisted the Cup before.

"It's 1 and 1A," Thornton said. "This one probably means a little more. I've been here a long time."

Now, with friends, family and fans all wanting to share his latest triumph, Thornton faces a dilemma. Can he get an extra day of Cup custody?

If anyone earned that right, it was Thornton.

His insertion back into the lineup before Game 3 changed the entire dynamic of the finals, giving the Bruins an important extra level of physicality.

No more doubters: Julien's the champ

► Bruins coach had plenty of detractors in the regular season, playoffs
► They're certainly silent now ► Through all the adversity, B's never stopped believing in the system ► Staying the course brought them a Cup

All season, he was dissected, derided and doubted.

Today, Claude Julien is decorated, as the Stanley Cup-winning head coach.

There were those, right up until Wednesday's final night of the 2010-11 season, who weren't convinced Julien could capture a Cup. But none of those doubters resided in the Bruins locker room, which stayed together through all adversity to bring Boston its first championship since 1972.

"As a coach, you understand that you are going to be subject to criticism, but the most important thing is what is going on inside that dressing room, and there wasn't a guy who didn't believe in what we were doing," Julien said. "So it was easy to stay the course. Had I worried about that other stuff, I probably wouldn't be standing here today."

"Stay the course," was the mantra of the Bruins

► The Bruins never doubted their coach. And, he delivered.

Here and there

Julien has coached eight seasons in the NHL.

► His first three were in Montreal, where he was fired midseason in 2006.
► He's posted three winning seasons with the B's.

throughout a regular season and postseason that saw a path littered with peaks and valleys. Never were the swings more apparent than during the playoffs, when the Bruins struggled on the power play, fell behind 2-0 in two different series and were forced to win three Game 7s, including Wednesday's Cup clincher.

"We believe in Claude and we always believed in the system," Patrice Bergeron said. "It works, and that shows right now that we're hoisting the Stanley Cup. We always believed in him and he has always believed in us. That's what this team is all about."

Duck Tours riding again

► B's will cruise on same company Sox, Pats, C's used for their parades

Boston Duck Tours, the company that has had the honor of cruising through the city with the Red Sox, Patriots and Celtics, geared up Thursday for a go-round with the Bruins.

"Basically we make sure all of the ducks are clean," marketing director Bob Schwartz said. "As they start coming back from tours on Friday, they begin prepping them."

The city requested to use 18 to 20 duck boats for the B's parade Saturday. They're retrofitted with special platforms to hold up the Bruins players, said Schwartz.

Schwartz said the company became the go-to after the Patriots took home a championship in 2001. Then the Red Sox wanted a turn in 2004. "After that, it almost just seemed like a tradition," he said.

Duck Tours donates the boats for the day.

► STEVE ANNEAR

► Erin Doherty will be one of the drivers in Saturday's Bruins parade.

A sweet win for Marchand

The emotion came pouring out of Brad Marchand like the sweat he expends every game.

After scoring the final goal of the Bruins' magical season, Marchand began to cry on the bench, the final seconds of Game 7 ticking away.

It was classic Marchand, a player who leaves all energy and inspiration on the ice, whether it's punching a Sedin brother because he feels like it, or punching the Bruins' final ticket to the Stanley Cup.

"Obviously, you dream of it as a kid, but I never thought it would happen," Marchand said. "It was just unbelievable." ► METRO

Bostonians have a love/hate musical deals with the "hate" portion, telling the story of three twentysome-forces that make the T suck so bad. Surely, it's a dream we've all had!

WEEKEND, JUNE 17-19, 2011

WARNER BROS. PICTURES

'Lantern' is dim

► Blake Lively and Ryan Reynolds co-star in "Green Lantern."

► Schlocky, witless script tears down this visually enjoyable comic book adaptation ► Even Ryan Reynolds can't save this film

"Don't believe the hype" could be the theme song of this summer's tent-pole releases. Everyone was chomping at the bit to see "Green Lantern," but like certain other summer releases before it (yeah, you, "Pirates"), the expectations far outmatched the final product.

The blame lies squarely on the four screenwriters who adapted the less-widely known comic book to the screen. The film fails to be funny when it's trying to be; and when it wants to be serious, it so heavily borrowed from the likes of old-school "Star Trek" that it feels like a half-baked parody. And for someone who is not a regular sci-fi fan, watching magenta-skinned alien Sinestro gravely explain the green lantern power ring is just, well — sorry, it's hilarious.

Poor Ryan Reynolds. He really does try to save this thing playing Green Lantern Hal Jordan. And you get the sense that he could if the script was just a bit more clever, but his scenes with love interest Carol Ferris (played on autopilot by Blake Lively) are so devoid of chemistry, and the lines are so obviously lifted from thousands of movies before it, that it is impossible to care about them as characters.

The only real treat here is the special effects, which make use of 3-D technology in a way that many other 3-D releases have failed to do. Evil enemy Parallax is one of the spookiest henchmen we've seen in a while, and if you're not too picky about, you know, storyline — or anything more meaningful than cool things to look at — this will definitely fit the bill.

star in "Company."

Let June 2011 be known as the month that Neil Patrick Harris made Broadway cool. OK, maybe that's a little extreme, but at least it could be known as the month that Harris cemented himself as Broadway's ambassador to Hollywood, with his hilarious hosting of the Tonys and his star turn in the Stephen Sondheim musical, "Company," which is in theaters this weekend for a limited run. The material is a little dated, but Harris brings some of his Barney from "How I Met Your Mother" to the role of Bobby, a single man with marriage-phobia who's bearing witness to the strained and strange relationships of his peers. At two and a half hours, it's an investment to watch a filmed play, but the bounty of co-stars and Harris' performance keep it mostly entertaining. PAT HEALY

Mr. Carrey's peeping penguins

► The 49-year-old comedian returns to the antics that made him famous, now with six waddling creatures

After years of making a fortune off of his elastic face, Jim Carrey is still finding new ways to manipulate it — though not all of them are intentional. “My face kind of operates on its own nowadays. It just kind of does what it wants to do. Sometimes it’s appropriate and sometimes it’s not,” he says. “Sometimes in the editing room, we’ll go, ‘That’s not human. Eyebrows aren’t supposed to do that.’”

After a few live-action roles that required less facial manipulation, Carrey returns to the type of mugging that made him famous in his latest, “Mr. Popper’s Penguins,” which pits his neat-freak corporate real estate broker against six new waddling house guests — played by a mix of animatronics, CGI stand-ins and real, live penguins. The working environment was more than a little challenging.

“The set was so cold that I was fighting pneumonia the entire time,” he says.

► As Mr. Thomas Popper, Jim Carrey enjoys a light dinner with his new friends.

Slapstickin’ it

A return to physical comedy also meant a return to childhood for Carrey.

“I find I’m still doing little tricks that I created when I was 10 years old,” he says. “The play you do when you’re a kid is so super-important. I’m so lucky that my life didn’t get turned upside down until I was 11, because I had a lot of creativity that still comes into play for me.”

“I’m Canadian. I have a little background with that.”

Acting challenges aside, Carrey cops to an affinity for his flightless co-stars: “I think that’s why we love penguins, because they don’t belong anywhere,” he says. “They’re wobbly and vulnerable, and they’re not really fish and they’re not really birds, and that’s how I feel.”

— Dorothy Robinson will return on Monday

So, how do we apply to be Ryan Reynolds?

Today's "what world do you people live in?!" moment is brought to you by Blake Lively, who co-stars in "Green Lantern" this weekend with Ryan Reynolds.

How did the actress try to "sabotage" her super-fit leading man? Take it away, Blake: "I would cook for the entire crew and I would try to lure him into eating some of the treats," she tells UsMagazine.com. "Cupcake lollipops, fresh candies, homemade caramel and marshmallows covered in chocolate — stuff like that."

The horror! And how do you feel about it, Blake? "I am a horrible person!"

We don't even care if she's joking. Does she have any idea — any at all — how happy some free stale doughnuts can make most workplaces? And to have someone even a fraction as hot as Blake Lively serving them?

Blake, we hope there's a newsroom in your near, unfortunate future.

► Don't you hate when you have to go to red carpet events with your gorgeous co-workers?

Hugh Hefner's revenge

Well, this is embarrassing: Crystal Harris is on the cover of the July Playboy wearing not much more than her now-ex's silk robe. It's too late to change the "Introducing Crystal Hefner" headline, so what did Hef do? Strategically slapped a big "Runaway bride in this issue!" sticker on her. A little awkward, sure, but in the realm of naked-ex revenge pictures, it's actually pretty tasteful.

Second life for Gaga's dress

Remember the "meat dress" Lady Gaga wore to the MTV Video Music Awards last year? It's now on display at the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, although not before some preservation work. "The dress was kept in a meat locker until the treatment was ready to begin," the Hall said in a statement to CNN.com. "It was then placed in a vat of chemicals and, while still pliable, was put on a body form and allowed to dry." Admittedly, we almost like it in zombie form.

"And she's introducing him as her boyfriend." Theroux also has an apartment in New York, which he'd shared with his girlfriend of 14 years, costume designer Heidi Bivens, until Bivens moved out last weekend, sources say. Previously, Theroux had usually stayed at the Chateau Marmont when in Los Angeles.

Christina on her divorce

Christina Aguilera is opening up about her recent divorce, telling W Magazine that she and ex-husband Jordan Bratman share the blame for their marriage ending. "At one time or another we were both not angels," Aguilera says. "It got to a point where our life at home was reminding me of my own childhood. I will not have my son grow up in a tension-filled home." And the singer, who's no stranger to life in the public eye, knew it wouldn't be an easy process: "I knew there would be a negative reaction in the press to my divorce, but I am not going to live my life because of something someone might say."

Justin Timberlake is coming to ex-girlfriend Britney Spears' defense after the "Femme Fatale" singer has been hit with a deluge of criticism online for her current dance moves. Choke? What choke? McIlroy leads charge

► Youngster forgets about Masters collapse in brilliant first round at Open ► It's his tourney to lose ... again

Rory McIlroy banished memories of his Masters meltdown in April by grabbing a commanding three-stroke lead in the first round of the U.S. Open on Thursday at Congressional Country Club.

The Northern Irishman fired a flawless 6-under 65 in wind, rain and sunshine on the tree-lined Blue Course to take control of the year's second major.

With a dazzling array of pinpoint approach shots and silky smooth putting, McIlroy ended the day three ahead of Y.E. Yang and Masters champion

"I played really good out there," McIlroy, 22, said greenside. "I didn't make any mistakes. I drove the

"I feel very comfortable with my game at the moment and I'm comfortable on this golf course."

British Open champion Louis Oosthuizen, Sergio Garcia, Ryan Palmer, Alexandre Rocha, Kyung-tae Kim and Scott Hend opened with 69s.

Defending champion Graeme McDowell and former major winners Stewart Cink and Davis Love III were among a group of nine players knotted on 70 after one round of play.

Lauzon: Training, work will get me back to UFC

► Lauzon (14-4) submitted Bobby Green with a rear naked choke in their bout at Affliction: Day of Reckoning in 2009.

► Local MMA pro once content to rest on his laurels ► Older, wiser at 23, he says he's a whole new fighter

For Bridgewater-based MMA pro Dan Lauzon, there was a time when being the youngest man to fight in the UFC was enough.

No more.

Now 23, Lauzon was just 18 when he made his UFC debut against Spencer Fisher in 2006, losing via TKO.

He reached the top promotion again in 2010, dropping a pair of fights.

The road back, Lauzon knows, is paved with hard work and wins — like in Saturday's World Championship Fighting 155-pound title fight against Noah Weisman in Wilmington.

"I just know I need to get focused," said Lauzon, whose brother Joe is a UFC regular. "I know I'm very talented. I've gotten as far as I have off talent alone; I never really trained for a fight as hard as I should have."

"I just need to stay focused and train as hard as I can. In the past, I haven't really done that."

Weisman, a Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu specialist out of Burlington, Vt., has won five of his first six pro bouts. He's on a three-fight winning streak after beating TKOing Joel Ly in February. ADAM SMARTSCHAN
